Report: Observation of World Earth Day 2026 Department of English

The Department of English, Jagannath Singh College observed World Earth Day 2026 with an insightful program aimed at fostering environmental consciousness among students and faculty. The event centered on the global theme, "Our Power, Our Planet," highlighting the collective responsibility and individual agency required to protect our ecosystem.

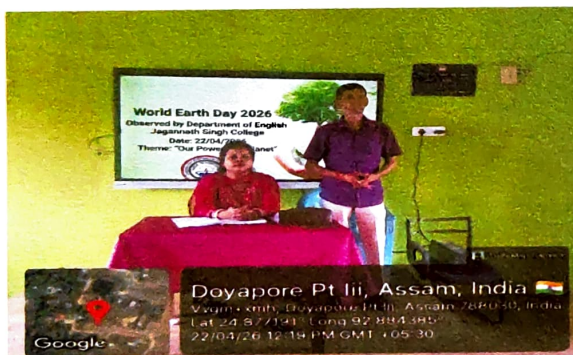

The program saw an active participation of 47 attendees, including students and faculty members. The proceedings were dedicated to understanding the intersection of human influence and environmental preservation.

The event featured two primary speakers from the Department of English, who shared their perspectives on the urgency of climate action. Dr. Susmita Mitra, HOD, Department of English, in her address, emphasized the "Power" aspect of the theme. She spoke about the power of literature and communication in shaping environmental ethics, urging students to use their voices to advocate for a greener future.

Dr. Koushik Nath, Assistant Professor, department of English, provided a detailed discourse on the practical implications of "Our Planet." He discussed the current environmental challenges and the necessity of sustainable living practices within the campus and beyond.

The speeches delivered were meticulously aligned with the theme "Our Power, Our Planet." The core message was clear: while humanity holds the power to alter the environment, it also possesses the unique power to restore and protect it through conscious decision-making and advocacy.

The observance concluded with a collective pledge by the participants to adopt more eco-friendly habits. The event successfully served as a platform for academic and environmental discourse, reinforcing the college's commitment to social and ecological responsibility.
